C. Clay was called from his field of usefulness;

control of this questions—cheers and prolonged appliance—proposed the constitutional amendment to the Southern States I advised such friends as sought my opinion on the question that it was better to accept it; but the feeding was so overwhelming against it shirt no voice could sustain it. Then there was the constitutional amendment. There was but one issue in it, and that was the suffrace question, and that Congress left with the States to settle for themseives. If we voted for it with the black race we might count them in our representation; if we refused to verwith them we could not count them. That was right, (cheers, great appliance and crise of "Right.") with the states to settle for themseives. If we with them we could not count them. That was right, (cheers, great appliance and crise of "Right.") with the words and the state of the country of the committee. The was but one there important of the country of the committee. The was but one there important of the country of the committee. The was but one there important of the country of the committee. The was but one there important of the country of the committee. The was but one that disqualited me and others like me, will soon pass from the stage, and if we do there are other and better men to take our place. Therefore, in my judgment, we acted very lajudiciously. What followed the Supplementary Reconstruction acts. I advised on the passage of the first of these that we should accept it. At that time it would have been easy for me to live. Without vanity I may say I had some popularity in my State, and had four times been encounced as an enemy of my race and a traitor to the cause which has wrought so much. I do not think so. I think my course more honorable than that of the many of the court of th

Mr. Evans, of Colorado, was allowed her full vote, as decided by the Convention this morning.

R.CLES OF ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The report was then adopted.

Mr. Barkers, of New York, from the Committee on Order of Business, reported the following rules:—

First—Upon all subjects before the Convention the States shal be called in alphabetical order.

Second.—Four votes shall be cast by the delegates at large of each State, and each Congressional district shall be entitled to two votes. The votes of each delegation shall be reported by its chairman.

Third—The report of the Committee on Credentials shall be disposed of before the report of the Committee on Platifum and Resolutions is acted upon; and the report of the Committee on Resolutions and Platform shall be disposed of before the Convention proceeds to the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President.

Fourtyle—In making nominations for President and ing the roll of the States in the order heretotore stated.

Sixth—In the record of the vote by States the vote of each State shall be announced by the Chairman; and in case any State shall be divided the Chairman shall announce the number of votes cast for any candidate or against any proposition.

Second—When the previous question shall be demanded by the majority of the delegation of any State, and the demand is seconded by two or more States, and the call sustained by the majority of the Convention, the question shall be proceeded with and disposed of according to the rules of the House of Representatives in such case.

Eight—No member shall speak more than ence upon the same question, nor longer than five minutes without the unanimous consent of the Convention, except that the delegate presenting the name of a candidate shall be allowed ten minutes to present the name of such candidate.

Ninth—The rules of the House of Representatives shall continue to be the rules of this Convention so far as they are applicable, and not inconsistent with the foregoing rules.

Tenth—National Union Executive Committee shall be appointed, to consist of one member from each State. Territory and District, and shall name, through State, Territory and District, and shall name, through their chairman, a person to act as member of such committe.

Mr. Van Zandt, of Rhode Island—Mr. President, I understand from a member of the Committee on Resolutions that it will be impossible for them to report before to-morrow afternoon, probably, and that will necessarily defer the nomination for President; I am led to the opinion, from what I have seen this afternoon, that the Convention is somewhat I npatient to proceed to the nomination. I therefore hope that the rules may be so modified as to strike out that portion of them which provides that the reports of the Committee on Credentials shall be disposed of before the Convention proceeds to the nomination of candidates. (Cries of "No! no !") If the Convention desire to annul my motion of course that is in order. I will confine it, however, to the Presidency.

Mr. Thompson, of Indiana—I fear the Convention may be led to act under misapprehension. I think I am authorized to say, as Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, that you may reasonably expect a report from us very early to-morrow morning. There is no reason why we should be engaged until to-morrow afternoon. It is right, therefore, and proper that you should understand how we stand before we vote on that proposition.

Mr. Bartholemew, of Pennsylvania—I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from Rhode Island by moving that this Convention do now proceed to the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-fresident of the United States. (Cries of "No, no.")

ceed to the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-Fresident of the United States. (Cries of "No, no.")

Mr. Coles, of North Carolina—I move to lay the motion and the amendment on the table. He withdrew it on learning from the Chair that this would table the entire report of the committee.

Mr. Van Zandt's amendment was then rejected. The question recurred on the adoption of the report. Mr. Van Zandt's amendment was then rejected. The question recurred to strike out the words "the national Union party" and substitute in their stead "mational union party" and substitute in their stead "mational republican party." (Cries of "Good.") He said—We fought under that flag for many years. Our brothers, our sons and our fathers have died under it. We have achieved victory under it; we elected Abraham Lincoln under it, and we will not call this a national Union party; that means nothing at all. The Union is restored; the Union is entire; and ours is a national republican party. I trust the Convention will allow me—(applause)—although I represent one of the smallest States in the Union, and one with a very limited number of electoral votes, to propose this to one very important and desirable amendment—one sir, in which I believe all the New England States will concur heart and soul, and one in which I sincerely hope the great and almost boundless West and South will join.

The President—In the call for this Convention the

with a purpose resignosity to serve t. 19 mills theory—and in the been analytic that it was the fruit to the the total chains of the constitution of the constitution

The eight hundred or one thousand delegates composing the Convention was called to order by Mr. Joseph M. Wightman, one of the State Central Committee. In putting the question as to who should be the presiding officer of the Convention Colonel Charles G. Greene, of Boston, was nominated. There was some opposition and a desire was expressed that a ballot should be had. This feeling was in the minority, however, and Colonel Greene was chosen minority, however, and Colonel Greene was chosen President a moment later by a unanimous vote and amid hearty cheering.

Colonel Greene, in taking the chair, said he was happy to see so many smiling faces, indicating that the heart of the democracy does not despair so long as there is the power of action. For some years the democrats have labored under misrepresentation: but they have labored in the hope that their true conduct would be known and that they would be triumphant. They had always labored to vindicate the constitution—never to sustain alavery or secession—and in this they had been steadfast and faithful, notwithstanding their opponents had misrepresented them. The fact, he added, is still on record that even the democrats of Massachusetts have sent more men to the war than the radicals, and the same may be said of the North and of the West were the men who filled democratic graves. He added then, in conclusion, that he would not dwell upon such matters, for everything indicated that the democracy of the country was advancing on to victory, and they would soon clear out those who have fastened upon the government only for the purpose of sucking out its life blood.

Some preliminary business was then transacted, after which a motion was made to appoint a Committee on Resolutions. It was evident that about a third of the Convention was opposed to making any declarations, but the other two-thirds, believing in sending some resolutions abroad, voted and carried their scheme. There subsequently followed some desultory discussion in which the minority succeeded in making the majority believe that it was more prudent to work than to pass resolutions, and the whole matter was then negatived by being laid on the table.

A committee to collect and count ballots for dele-

A committee to collect and count ballots for delegates at large was then chosen, and while they were performing their duties a call was made for Mr. John Quincy Adams, the defeated democratic eandidate for Governor last year. Mr. Adams took the platform and returned his thanks for the support he had at the hands of Massachusetts democrats last year, but declined to make any remarks upon the topic of the day for the reason that it was inexpedient at this time.

The committee being further delayed in counting, Mr. McIntosh, of Haverhill, improved the moments of silence by offering the following Pendieton resolution:—

Resolved, That the democracy of Massachusetts, feeling the fullest confidence in the ability, integrity and statesmanship of George H. Pendieton, of Ohio, and believing that a larger number of votes can be concentrated upon him than any other man in the party, we therefore propose him as our first choice for President of the United States.

The resolution evidentity did not touch the popular A committee to collect and count ballots for dele-larger number of votes can be concentrated upon him than any other man in the party, we therefore propose him as our first choice for President of the United States.

The resolution evidently did not touch the popular chord of the Convention; for it was received with hisses and immediately laid upon the table by an almost unanimous vote.

The following resolution, which also came from a delegate not of the majority, met with the same fate:—

Resolved, That the delegation from Massachusetts to the National Democratic Convention be instructed to cast the votes of the delegation in accordance with the vote of a majority of the delegation. In accordance with the vote of a majority of the delegation in accordance with the vote of a majority of the delegation.

The committee subsequently reported, when it appeared that the following delegates were chosen at large:—Josiah G. Abbott and Josiah Bardwell, of Boston; George W. Gill, of Worcester, and Reuben Noble, of Westfield. The alternates were as follows:—J. K. Tarbox, of Lawrence; T. H. Sweetser, of Lowell; Thomas F. Plunkett, of Pittsfield, and George Johnson, of Bradford.

Subsequent to the General Convention the delegates from the Third Congressional district held as sub-convention, and elected as delegates James M. Keith, of Boston, and Michael Doherty, of Boston, and James H. Tallon, of Boston. The Fourth district delegates made choice of Peter Harvey, of Boston, and Thomas Whittemore, of Cambridge, and as alternates E. C. Barnes, of Chelsea, and A. O. Brewster, of Boston. The Fifth district selected as delegates Charles Clark, of Lynn, and C. O. Morse, of Newburyport, and as alternates Charles Ropes, of Salem, and Charles Thompson, of Gloucester. The delegates from the Ninth district selected as delegates are William H. Fuller, of Whateley, and Otts J. Hale, of Hubbardston. The Tenth district delegates are A. W. Chapin, of Springfield, and John R. Briggs, of Sheffield, and L. C. Jaguith, of Fitchburg, and the alternates are Milliam the Aller and John R. Briggs, for the Purchase of American Iron-Clads-Havana.

THE SPANISH WAR IN THE PACIFIC.

The following is an abstract of a lengthy article published April 20 in the Nacional of Lima:—
In May, 1867. Don J. Arnaldo Marquez was sent from Peru as Consul General for New York. He arrived about the time that the news was announced of Spanish squadrons having salled from Cuba and Spain for Rig Janeiro and Montevideo. The appropriations made by the Spanish Cortés for a second expedition to the Pacific authorized the presumption that these squadrons were to go round the Horn eventually. A few days thereafter the New York papers published a list of iron-clads which the United States government was about to offer for sale. There were only two of these fit for Peruvian service—the Oneota and Catawba. Consul Marquez at once proposed to his iawia. Consul Marquez at once proposed to his government the purchase of both. Then the Chileno-Peruvian nay could make some headway against the Spanish squadron, which included several iron-clads. The Peruvian Congress at once authorized the use of from five to six millions by Marquez for the purchase of those war vessels and material. Marquez &on set about ascertaining whether the American government had become coid towards of Mr. Seward's offers to mediate. He then of said monitors and learned that the describer of said monitors and learned that the observed of said monitors and learned that the observed of said monitors and learned that the observed of the Dunderburg. The American government preferred this mode of procedure. The firm of Alex. Swift & Co. ciaimed over $200,000 of the United States on the ground that the value of the paper money for which they had contracted to build the Oncota and Catawba had depreciated to that amount since the signing of their contract. After having become satisfied of the right and authority of the agent to sell the vessels Marquez songht to ascertain their fitness for service. Ampie proofs of this were Atthe same time he made the following sognetiment. At the same time he made the following sognetiment. At the same time he made the following sognetiment. That the two monitors be sent to Havana, whose fortifications could not keep them from entering the harbor, as they are mounted with only a few 200-pounders; that they should capture or destroy the Spanish wooden feet there; that the commander should issue an ultimatum requiring Spain to return the three millions of $200-100. The commander should issue an ultimatum requiring Spain to return the three millions of $200. The commander should issue an ultimatum requiring from Cuba they were to receive the Rayo at Carthagena and capture the Spanish frigate Gerona that was watching her. The only serious resistance that could be offered to the two monitors at the foot of Morro Castle.
